

Oncode's first Annual Art and Science Award

As scientists, we strive to increase knowledge through experiments in the lab. Creativity and skills come together to discover great things! Sometimes, this process creates stunning images. These images are developed in your lab, but unfortunately aren't seen by many.

In order to give visibility to the beauty of science, Oncode Institute teamed up with Frank Bos and Yuva Oz. Frank Bos is a researcher in the lab of Oncode Investigator Anne Rios. Together with Arnout Schepers, he founded pArt of Science, a company that organizes Art competitions and prints microscopy photos professionally. Yuva Oz is a business developer at Oncode Institute and also owner of Art 4 Science. Oncode, pArt of Science and Art 4 Science are now organising the first annual Art and Science Award as part of the Annual Scientific Meeting. To kick off this first edition with a bang, there will be a significant amount of prize money.

We would like to invite all Oncode and CGC researchers to submit their most awesome and best self-produced image. Images could include eye-catching photography, artistic and graphic interpretation of scientific topics, microscopy images, creative data visualization, protein structures, drawings, paintings, or graphic illustrations with scientific context.

We understand how proud you are of your images - and we realize how little time you have - therefore:

- Images do not have to be high resolution at this point. We will ask you for the highest resolution file when needed.
- Oncode, pArt of Science and Art 4 Science will not use your image for other purposes unless we have your consent.
- Include two sentences on the description of your image.
- You can submit up to 3 art works for consideration.

Prize

The jury will decide on the 1st (1.000 euro), 2nd (750 euro) and 3rd (500 euro) prize, which will be awarded during the Annual Scientific Meeting. The winners will also receive a beautiful big print of their image.

Deadline

To participate, please submit your image before August 21st to events@oncode.nl.
